FRIDAY, NOV. 27 & SATURDAY, DEC. 5 CONCERTS ARE CANCELLED

Deane Center Executive Director Kevin Connelly has announced that the Stage Fright concert on Friday, Nov. 27 and the Like A Hurricane concert on Saturday, Dec. 5 have been cancelled due to COVID-19. The Wellsboro House Restaurant and Brewery and Deane Center were co-sponsoring the two concerts. Both were to be at 7 p.m. in the Coolidge Theatre. Seating was limited in keeping with coronavirus social distancing guidelines and masks were required. Members of Stage Fright include: Joe Callahan of Wellsboro, Sean Monroe of Horseheads, N.Y., Mike Watkins of Addison, N.Y. and Mike Nickerson of Corning, N.Y. Guest musicians who were going to perform are: Josh Sperrick and Manny Quinones, both of Corning, N.Y. and Brandon Lusk of Wellsboro. Like A Hurricane, a Neil Young tribute band based in Syracuse, N.Y., includes: Thom Hogan, Mike Vertino, Jeff Roney and Pete "Pedro" Shank. "At the time we scheduled these concerts, the virus situation was not like it is now," said Connelly. "With more people in our area testing positive for the coronavirus, the risk of holding indoor events has been increasing. In addition, it would have been difficult for band members and fans to come here from New York in the face of recent Pennsylvania guidelines restricting travel to and from our state along with enhanced mask requirements. Coupled with the CDC guidance to avoid travel during the upcoming holidays, it became clear that for the safety of these performers and our audiences, we had to cancel these concerts," Connelly said. "We will reschedule both when they can be held safely. In the meantime, we are contacting those who purchased tickets to arrange for refunds," he added. For more information, email office@deanecenter.com, visit deanecenter.com or call the Deane Center at 570-724-6220.
